INTERESTS AND HOBBIES

I love technology, I am self-studying how to program in C and recently I made a program that counts to 0 for any number you give. I also like the hardware aspect of technology, when I got my computer I first took it apart and tried to identify any pieces I could. Another passion that I have is for community service. I volunteer at my local library where I count board game pieces, sanitize toys, etc. These help the library host events where those items can be used. I also participate in LYPC, where my decisions have a visible effect on the community.
